Good Morning Andrea,

In case we don't get a chance to talk before you go home tomorrow. I just wanted to say thank you for listening and supporting me with everything. You are the only person who knows what happened and I feel horrible that you had to be involved in all the drama. Initially I was just so concerned about her that is all I could think about. After we found out she was OK my feelings shifted to anger and hurt. I keep hoping that it will get better as each new day comes. Unfortunately, it is not. I am embarrassed (as a man) to say that I have been sobbing like a girl for days. I have to get up in the middle of night and hide in the basement to let it out.

I had a storybook fantasy of living happily ever after with someone I loved more than anything in the world (and I thought I was loved back). Last year I came to grips with the fact that it was not going happen. I loved to see her happy and I continued to encourage, love and support respectfully from a afar. I had finally found some inner peace with myself after three years of longing to be together.

I was confused, but enlightened when she told me how she still felt the other night. I know she sheds her inhibitions when she drinks, I could rationalize her saying certain things out loud or acting sad, jealous or frustrated. I could deal with that because she said she loves me and wished that things had turned out differently.

Pelley called me on my way in and said "you and Colburn tonight... have fun!" WTF? People are laughing and talking under their breath around here and they abruptly stop when I walk in the room. He has that shit eating grin on his face as he walks around here with feathers all fluffed. He laughed and said "If you hear any stories about me and her I'm gonna deny it.". I saw them at the bar, I saw his hands all her ass and she was liking it. I saw them walk out to the parking lot and come back some time later. I approached her and she looked and me and said "I need a fucking cigarette". I walked away....

Later that night after you guys left I was washing stuff in the kitchen, Rob, OB, Pat where standing at bar. I could hear them talking about her and that she was saying some intense sexual things to Pat before they left to go to the parking lot. Then Rob said "Oh yeah she's like that... She told me at the xmas party that she blew Brett on the way over to Ryder's house and spit it into a bottle". I walked out and they suddenly all starting sipping their beers at the same time.

To me her actions that night had one sole purpose: to inflict hurt and pain onto me. She is good at what she does! I have never felt such pain!! Once again in my life I dole out love, compassion and understanding for a return investment of severe torture!!! We have had many conversations and she knows I'm vulnerable and am way too sensitive. She used this against me to hurt me. Her actions are completely unforgivable and that she never even attempted to inquire about me or apologize makes me wonder who the hell is this person? I will never see her the same way (not that I even want to see her). I can't imagine hurting someone I don't like, I couldn't live with that.

I'm rambling on.... But I wanted to paint a picture for this next part which you will not be happy with and I'm sorry. With all of this turmoil in my life and reflecting how I am handling it. I can't even tell which way is up. I can't imagine how I could ever take this job and face these people as their boss on a regular basis. I don't trust anyone (other than you) and I am a bad judge of character (obviously). As a matter of survival I need to focus on me and push away all of these selfish people in my life. I plan on withdrawing from the hiring process. I am going to give it the weekend just to be sure, but I fell I'm sure. You are my most respected confidant and friend and I truly value the work you do for this department. I will be sure to cover your ability and that you are valued asset to us with the new guy!!! Don't be scared everything will work out just fine.

Sorry :(

Interim Town Administrator

RE: Sergeant Robert Bielecki

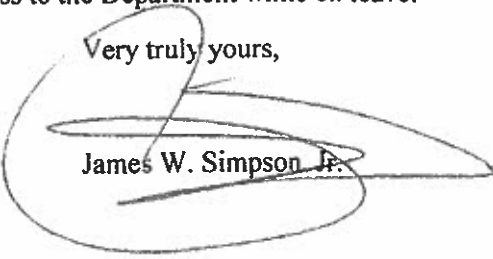

Dear Mr. Terenzini:

Please be advised that this office represents Sgt. Robert Bielecki. As you know, he has been on paid leave pursuant to G.L. c. 41 Section 111F as a result of a workplace injury. Up until recently, Sgt. Bielecki has been able to maintain contact with the Department either through online interdepartmental access or by his Department issued cell phone. Recently however, his access to the Department has been restricted and ultimately blocked by Chief Ryder. More recently, Sgt. Bielecki attempted to gain entry into the Department while he was next door running errands. He was advised by fellow officers that his access credentials to the station were revoked by the Chief.

As you are aware, the Board of Selectmen voted to request that the FBI investigate allegations of mis-management within the Town's Police Department. As a result of Town's request, the FBI has been speaking to current and former employees. As an active employee of the Town, Sgt. Bielecki was obligated to cooperate with the FBI's investigation. I am sure that you would agree that his actions in cooperating with the investigation are completely appropriate. Unfortunately, Chief Ryder has apparently chosen to take the opposite view. It has come to my client's attention that Chief Ryder (prior to being placed on administrative leave by the Town) may have made comments to other officers of his believe that Sgt. Bielecki was "scorching him with the FBI" or words to that effect. Clearly, Chief Ryder's unprecedented actions towards Sgt. Bielecki demonstrate a pattern of behavior designed to dissuade him from cooperating with the investigation that the Town initiated.

As you know, under M.G.L. c. 149 Section 185, (Massachusetts so-called Whistleblower Law) public employers are prohibited from retaliation against employees who provide information to any public body investigating any violation of law, rule or regulation. I trust that the Town will further review this matter and restore Sgt. Bielecki's access to the Department while on leave.

Very truly yours,

James W. Simpson, Jr.
